Burns Prove Fatal to 2-Year-Old Lad

Paul Leindecker of Mill Creek is Victim of Horrible Accident

Child of Mr. and Mrs. John Leindecker Spills Pail of Scalding Water Over His Breast and Dies in Convulsions--Family Has Had Series of Misfortunes

As the result of terrible burns sustained when he spilled a pail of boiling water over his body, Paul Gilbert, the two-year-old son of Mr| and Mrs. John Ledindecker of Mill Creek, died at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. The accident occurred at noon Tuesday and after home remedies were applied it was not thought that the child's injuries were as serious as they later proved to be. However, Wednesday the victim became suddenly worse and Dr. McMichael of Keene was summoned. During the afternoon, he was attacked by convulsions and death relieved the unfortunate babe from suffering.

SERIES OF MISFORTUNES.

The tragedy is the climax of a series of misfortunes that have befallen the Leindecker family within the past two years. Mr. Leindecker has undergone an extended siege of typhoid fever and several times was at the point of death but he has now practically recovered. In addition his barn was burned and last fall, while Mr. Leindecker was lying critically ill, sneak thieves entered his cellar and carried away meat and canned fruit.

Body Mass of Burns.

Tuesday noon, while Mrs. Leindecker was busy about the kitchen preparing dinner, the child pulled a tin pail, filled with boiling water from the stove. The contents were poured over the victim's breast and his body was a mass of burns. The mother at once applied home remedies to alleviate the excruciating pain, while Mr. Leindecker hurried to Keene to Summon Dr. McMichael. The physician happened to be away from home so Mrs. Barcroft a trained nurse, who happened to be at the home of A. E. Ames, a neighbor was called in. The nurse attended the child and he appeared to be resting as easy as could be expected.

Burns Prove Fatal.

Wednesday morning, the sufferings of the victim increased and a physician was summoned. He at once found that the burns were so serious that very little hope could be held out for the child's life. During the afternoon, one attack of convulsions followed another and despite everything that could be done. The family has the heartfelt sympathies of the entire neighborhood. The victim succombed to his injuried at 6 o'clock. The funeral arrangements had not been completed last evening.

Keene Farmer Buys Runabout

E. M. Norman, a well known farmer of the Keene vicinity, has purchased a Maxwell runabout from George Siegrist, the local agent. The machine was delivered Wednesday.

Injury Proves Serious

As a result of having a finger pinched while opening a parasol several days ago, Miss Margaret Keifer, employed as a domestic at the Mrs. Ida Hay home, is threatened by blood poisoning.

The injury, while apparently trivial at first, began to give Miss Keifer much pain yesterday and she visited a physician's office where the finger was given medical treatment. Her condition is such that the victim returned to her home at Mohawk yesterday.

H. M. Ewing, the local insurance man made a business trip to Baltic Wednesday.

Each Township to be Organized

As Branch of Law and Order League--Permanent County Organization is Formed at Meeting Held at Warsaw Wednesday Evening

A meeting of the county law enforcement committee was held last evening in the Presbyterian church in Warsaw to perfect the organization begun at a meeting held in this city two weeks ago. Besides the members of the temporary committee appointed at the meeting here a number of men from this city and from various parts of the county, interested in the movement, were present at the Warsaw meeting.

Permanent Organization.

The temporary organization consisting of President E. C. Darling of Nellie, Rev. Gay of Conesville, J. C. Miskimen of Linton-tp., D. B. Whittemore of Keene and George Adams of West Lafayette was made permanent. Rev George Davidson of Warsaw acted as temporary secretary. Rev. Gay was also chosen as treasurer of the committee.

To Organize Townships.

It was decided to begin at once a canvass of every township in the county and a series of public meetings will be held at thirty points in the county as the initial step in effecting township organizations. These meetings will begin Monday evening of next week and two speakers will be assigned to each meeting.

County Mass Meeting.

A uniform plan of procedure and organization will be outlined for these speakers and at the close of the series of local meetings a county mass meeting will be held in this city and will be addressed by a speaker of national reputation. The immediate object of the organization will be to secure the enforcement of the law not only against the speakeasies in this city, but wherever illicit sales of intoxicants are being made in every part of the county.

Has Narrow Escape from Electrocution

Lewis Merrell, who is employed at the Stewart Carriage Works on Mulberry street, was severly shocked Wednesday morning when he came in contact with the electric power wire connected with the blower of the shop forge. Merrell was thrown across the room against the slack tub and sustained a scalp wound several inches in length.

Helper also Shocked.

Merrell was getting ready to start the blower of the forge which is operated by electricity and when his hand touched the wire he was thrown to the ground carrying the wire with him. His helper, Frank Mueller, quickly seized a board and with great presence of mind knocked the wire from Merrell's hands, but in attempting to pick up the injured man was himself badly shocked.

But for Mueller's quick work Merrell would undoubtedly have been electrocuted as the wire which he touched carried 2300 volts of electricity. As it was, Merrell was able to resume his work shortly.

All Iron Charged.

Mr. Stewart in talking of the accident stated that on account of some trouble with the wiring, all the iron in the whole shop had become charged and stated that in opening the doors early in the morning he had received a shock when he touched the catch at the top of the door. A force from the Electric Light Co., tore out all the wiring in the building and is replacing it with new as Mr. Stewart refused to permit his men to work while there in danger of further accidents.

Local Lads Join Army in Chicago

Two Coshocton youths who recently made a pleasure trip to Chicago and have since returned are living in constant fear as a result of an escapade in that city.

JOIN U. S. ARMY.

While in a very uncertain mood, the two young men are said to have joined the United States army through the recruiting station there and after having eaten six meals on the credit of Uncle Sam, came to themselves and decided that they had made a mistake and hot-footed it back to dear old Coshocton.

It is not known whether the authorities will make an attempt to return the boys to Chicago to serve out their years in the army or not.

Farmer Thrown from Wagon and Seriously Hurt

Robert DeWitt, Aged 65, Victim of Mishap While Crossing Temporary Bridge in Jackson Tp. Wednesday

Robert DeWitt, aged 55, who resides on the Miller farm in Jackson tp., was seriously injured Wednesday afternoon at about 4 o'clock as the result of an accident at the Lowery bridge on the Mt. Vernon road about 2 miles west of Roscoe. The bridge at this point has been closed to traffic for some time and a temporary structure had been built over the creek a little distance below, and while driving down the steep bank which leads to it DeWitt fell from his wagon and rolled to the bridge below, sustaining severe bruises and cuts about his face and body, together with internal injuries, the extent of which cannot be ascertained for several days.

FALLS TO BRIDGE.

DeWitt was driving a wagon from which the bed had been removed and in attempting to put on the brakes on the steep grade lost his balance on the narrow coupling bar and fell to the bridge below.

Stitches for Wounds.

The injured man was picked up and carried to the home of D. J. Lowrey, and Dr. Neldon was called from this city. When he arrived it was found necessary to put stitches in five bad cuts on his face while his numerous bruises about the body were dressed. The victim was also suffering from pains in his chest and bowels and Dr. Neldon fears that he was internally injured, but he will be unable to learn the extent for a few days.

In Serious Condition.

The victim was removed to his home later in the evening where he is resting in a serious condition. The advanced age of the injured man makes his condition all the more doubtful, but unless his internal injuries prove to be more serious than is anticipated, he will probably recover.

Fear Foul Play

Friends of Dallie Williams, a well known farmer of the Spring Mountain vicinity, were in the city Wednesday afternoon on a search for a man, who has been mysteriously missing from his home since last Monday morning. On that day, he left coming to this city for the purpose of paying his taxes. He was seen here at noon Monday by Marion Van Kannel after which no trace of the missing man has been found.

FOUL PLAY FEARED.

Investigation showed that Williams failed to pay his taxes and it is feared that he has met with foul play. No possible reason could be assigned by his family or friends, why Williams would voluntarily leave his home. Samuel Elder of Warsaw and Prof. N. S. McClure had charge of the search last night and the local police were appealed to give their aid. Williams has a wife and several children.

Friends Submit to Skin Grafting

Miss Nanna Elder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Elder of N. Third St., was one of seventy-five young people of Redlands, California who gave a patch of skin to be grafter upon the body of a friend injured in a motor cycle accident there a short time ago.

HORRIBLY BURNED.

Miss Elder belongs to a motor cycle club and during a recent outing the young lady who suffered the painful accident was riding on the seat placed behind the rider and just over the gasoline tank, when the tank, from which the tap had become loose exploded. The victim was horribly burned about the limbs and her condition was such that surgeons stated that her only hope for recovery lay in the grafting on of healthy human skin. Following this statement seventy-five friends of the young women responded to the request and were summoned to the hospital where the surgeons and nurses did the work deftly as a last resort for their patients life. Miss Elder writes that the young lady apparently has some chance for recovery since the operation, but that her condition remains exceddingly grave.

Home is Struck by Lightning

The country home of David Martin, near Mound, was struck by lightning and considerably damage during the storm of Tuesday evening. Fortunately the members of the family were seated at the supper table in an outkitchen when the flash came and escaped the shock.

GRATE IS WRECKED.

The bolt struck the chimney, which is built in almost the center of the house, and passing downward, wrecked the grate in the sitting room. Plastering was torn from the walls and slate from the roof. The damage is covered by insurance in the McConnell & Karr agency.

Miner Has Foot Caught Under Coal

Ray Failor, employed at the Davis mine near Conesville, had a foot badly bruised under a fall of coal while at work Tuesday noon. As a result, the young man will be laid up for several weeks.

BLOOMFIELD PICNIC.

Arrangements are being made to hold the big annual Bloomfield farmers' picnic in the grove near that place, Saturday, August 19.

Foundry Room is Gutted by Flames

Keagy and Lear Machine Shops Badly Damaged by Midnight Elaze--Fire had Smouldered Unnoticed all Evening --Loss Will be $200

The foundry room of the Keagy & Lear Machine Shop was gutted Wednesday night as the result of a fire which broke out at 11 o'clock and for a time the whole shop was threatened. Prompt and effective work by the fire department confined the flames to the foundry room. The loss was about $200 all of which is covered by insurance.

STARTS FROM CUPOLA.

It is thought that the blaze was started by a spark from the cupola which had been caught in some of the woodwork and smouldered unnoticed. The fire was discovered almost simultaneously at 11:15 o'clock by Jay Abbott who called the department by telephone and Wm. Loder, who turned in an alarm from box No. 41 at the corner of Pine and South Lawn Avenue. At that time the flames were already burning fiercely.

A Splendid Run.

The department after a splendid run arrived on the scene within ten minutes after the alarm had been received and after a half-hour's hard work had the fire under control. Capt. Ralston had charge of the work in the absence of Chief Tracewell.

The water pressure was fairly good, due perhaps to the recent rains and the late hour of the night.

Will Work Today.

The loss which will amount to about $200 is covered by insurance with McConnell & Karr, Baker-Herbig Boyer Co., Glenn O. Boyd and Norris Insurance Co.

Twelve men are employed in the foundry department, but as the cupola itself was practically undamaged, they will probably be able to continue work today.

AIKIN TAX TO BE PAID

The Aikin tax and penalty certified against nine local dealers, following a visit by a detective from the state dairy and food commissioner's office during centennial week, must be paid, in full, into the county treasury. Then as these same dealers signify their intention to quit business, the portion of the tax from that date to the end of the period for which they are certified, is to be refunded. However, no refunder is to be allowed on the penalty for the entire period.

WILL QUIT BUSINESS.

The above is the gist of the instructions given Auditor Frank Mowrey and Prosecutor George Klum, who with Attorney Joe McDowell, representing several of the dealers consulted State Auditor Fullington and Attorney General Hogan in Columbus Wednesday afternoon as to the course to be pursued in a prompt settlement of the cases. A conference was held by the officials and Attorney McDowell at the court house Wednesday morning, with the view of settling the cases and it was decided to confer with the state officials. It is understood that practically all of the men, against whom the tax was assessed, have signified their intention to settle up and quiet business at once.

Will Attend Meet of Insurance Men

Mr and Mrs. Frank Karr and son Thomas will leave today on a trip to Columbus and Toledo. They expect to be gone several days and in the latter city, Mr. Karr will attend the annual meeting of the State Local Insurance Agents association.

NEEDLE THROUGH FINGER

Mrs. Israel Jones of Franklin Station was the victim of a very painful accident Wednesday noon. While rubbing a waist on a washboard, a needle, which happened to be in the garment, was forced entirely through the middle finger of her right hand.

Dr. Marquand of Conesville was summoned and after removing the needle, gave the wound medical attention.

Fiend Attacks Child in Blackberry Patch

While picking blackberries on the Johnson hill north of the basins Wednesday morning, two little girls, Mary Fisher, the 13-year-old daughter of John Fisher of Chestnut street and Katie Howlett of the same street, were attacked by an unknown man, who however was frightened away before he could accomplish his purpose.

PICKING BERRIES.

The little girls had gone to pick blackberries with the brothers of the Fisher girl, Charles, 18, and Gilbert, 16, but in the course of the morning they wandered away from them and were playing in a deserted part of the patch when attacked.

Man to Rescue.

The man dashed through the bushes and seized the Howlett girl while the Fisher child, who was up the hill a short distance, screamed and shrieked for aid. Ed. Taylor, who was on another side of the hill picking berries, was attracted by the cries of the girls and at once rushed to their rescue and as he came to the spot, saw the brute disappear over the crest of the hill. It was said the little girl cut the fiend attempted to tear the clothes from her body and that he tried to stop her screams by placing his hand over her mouth.

Seen in City.

Wednesday afternoon the little girls saw the man walk down Chestnut street with a pail of blackberries and the police were notified but late last night no report of his capture had been received. Taylor also was able to give a good description of the man.

Meets Death in Accident at Columbus

Miss Lulu Stephens of West Main street left yesterday to attend the funeral of her father, whose death occurred at the Protestant hospital, Columbus, at an early hour yesterday morning, as a direct result of injuries received Monday when he was struck by a street car.

Mr Stephens was 85 years of age, but he was in unusually good health, considering his advanced age, and continued to attend to his business affairs. He was on the way down town and was crossing the track to take an approaching car when he was run down and fatally injured.

In addition to the daughter in this city one son, Edward of California and three daughters Mrs. Charles Giffee, Mrs. James N. Kennon, and Mrs. Louis B. Carter, all of Columbus, survive. Mrs. Stephens died last January.

At the time that the daughter in Coshocton received the news of her father's death she was preparing to go to Columbus for a visit with him, as she had not seen him for several months. The train that was to have taken her to Columbus yesterday for a pleasant visit with her father took her instead to his funeral.

$250 Back Pension for Mrs. Easton

Mrs. Elizabeth Easton, who recently applied through Squire Wimmer for back pension amounting to nearly $300, which she had failed to receive during the past two years, because she had not signed her vouchers, on Tuesday received a voucher for $250 from the pension officer in Columbus. This amount covers the back pension due her up until June 4th of this year.

The trip will take two or three weeks and the merry party of six, chaperoned by Mrs. McCue, anticipate a delightfully pleasant and restful voyage.

No Action Can be Taken by Council

Some misunderstanding as to the meaning of Councilman Riley's discussion on the water question as given in yesterday's Tribune seems to have arisen. Mr. Riley does not wish it understood that he thinks council will take things into their hands and decide between the two kinds of pumps, as council can do nothing before the board of control makes their recommendation, but he simply suggested that council find out for its own benefit the relative merits of the steam and electric pumps, so that they would be able to understand the situation when it comes to issuing bonds for the carrying out of the suggestions of the board of control.

PRESIDENT GOMEZ.

Charges Against Cuban President May Result In Revolt.

CUBA HAS TROUBLES

Rumors of Discontent Growing Into Real Revolutionary Talk.

Havana, July 11.—Widespread comment has been caused here by the allegations made against President Gomez, which in substance charge that his administration has been connected with grafting operations. Rumors of discontent in the provinces during the last few days are growing into real revolutionary talk. The unrest is believed to be caused by the publication in the Havana newspapers two weeks ago of the accumulation of President Gomez and the wide discussion thereof by the local press. It was announced then that the president had purchased lots at the corner of Prado and Colon streets for $125,000 and would erect a mansion covering fully half a city block. The articles pointed out that Senor Gomez took the presidency with no assets except $89,000 debts, and as his salary for his two years of incumbency is only $25,000 a year the anti-administration papers commented sarcastically on the economical abilities of the president. This seems to have aroused the agitators in the outlying provinces.

Petition for Peace Bond is Dismissed

The case of Wm. C. McCoy vs. John Wilden, both of Pleasant Valley was dismissed last evening when the plaintiff failed to appear after the court had waited one hour past the time set for the hearing. The plaintiff alleged that Wilden had threatened him and asked that he be placed under a peace bond. The action was begun in Squire Wimmer's court.

Horse Dies of Lockjaw

Trial of Horse Case Postponed

The case of A. J. Randles against Sam Hamilton, charging misrepresentation in a horse deal has been continued in Squire E. Fisher's court in Bethlehem township. The reason for the postponement was that the principal witness in the case, John M. Adams, was unable to appear on account of the death of his sister.

Last Sad Rites.

The remains of the late John Baumgardner were laid to rest yesterday afternoon in Darling cemetery, following impressive services at the home of Mr. Baumgardner's daughter, Mrs. Coffman. Hook Continues Brilliant Work

A clipping from a Huntington, Ind., paper has the following to say about "Katy" Hook the local boy who is making a splendid record for himself in the Northern State League:

"Hooke, the little pitcher for the Indians played a good game, and at all times showed excellent control. One of the things that struck the fancy of the rooters was his ability to peg to first and catch a runner napping."

In the game spoken of, Hooke held Wabash to nine scattered hits and three runs, making 7 assists and scoring two hits and a run in five times at bat.

Wages Attached for Grocery Bill

Attachment proceedings on the wages of John Monti, who is employed at the Clow works, were begun yesterday by the Crawford Bros., to recover $169 which is said to be due them for meat and groceries furnished. Monti, it is said, has left the county with the intention of defrauding his creditors.

Balliet Agrees to Support Child

John Balliet pleaded guilty to the charge of non-support of a five months' old child and was fined $200 and costs. The fine, however, was suspended and Balliet promised to pay $8 a month for the support of the child. Security for the payment of this amount was given Humane Officer Yeisel in the form of a lien on some property.

SAGE AND SULPHUR

Made Her Look Twenty Years Younger

READ MRS. HERRICK'S SWORN STATEMENT

COUNTY OF MONROE }

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl, I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my schoolmates, and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. As I grew older, my hair commenced to come out, just a little at first, but gradually more and more, and then began to turn gray. I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy to try a bottle. My hair was quite thin and gray when I began using Sage and Sulphur, and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, being thicker, darker and more glossy than it had been for a long time. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is now as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is still in splendid condition.

A Riot of Ink.

Canon Nicholl used to tell how on one occasion he had visited the famous house of the Thrales in that suburb of London where Dr. Johnson was at home. "Johnson," said the canon in recalling his visit, "had occupied two rooms, and these were left as he last used them. The sight was an extraordinary one, for ink was splashed all over the floor and even on the walls. It was one of the doctor's habits to dip his pen in ink and then shake it."

No Games for Several Weeks

Manager Larcomabe of the Buckeyes stated yesterday that there would be no ball games at Riverside park for the next couple of weeks, on account of the poor attendance that has been the rule for the games played so far.

Next Saturday, the Buckeyes go to Fresno, where they will play the team of that place, Payne and Thompson will compose the battery for the locals.

On Saturday July 22, the Buckeyes play at Buffalo where they will hook up with the fast team of that place for the first time. On the 23 they play another game at Eyesville where they were defeated by the close score of 1 to 0 several weeks ago.

Emulated Jessie James.

Akron, O., July 12. After witnessing a production of the "James Boys in Missouri," at a local moving picture show, Edna Peebles, 13, of Akron, stepped into the Falls Savings bank at Cuyahoga Falls, and pointing a 38 caliber revolver at the bookkeeper, D. R. Gensemer, demanded that he turn over to her the money in the vault. On the pretense that he did not know the combination, he persuaded the girl to leave. A short time later she was arrested. She told the authorities that she was led to make the attempt by her desire for pretty dresses.

SUES TRUSTEES FOR SETTLEMENT

State Acts Against Executons Who Failed to Do Their Duty.

Columbus, O., July 11.—Attorney General Hogan has taken steps to compel the executors and trustees of three important trusts in Cleveland to carry out the provisions of these trusts. He has sent petitions to be filed in the Cuyahoga county common pleas court to mandamus those in charge of these trusts to perform their duties. Three wealthy Cleveland citizens left large sums of money to be used for the establishment of public art galleries, but no attempt has been made by the executors and trustees to execute their trusts.

The most important of the three cases is that against Edwin R. Perkins and others, who have charge of the million-dollar estate of the late John Huntington, which, under the provisions of his will, was to be used in founding the John Huntington Art and Polytechnic trust, with which to establish and maintain an art gallery. They have had charge of the estate 15 years, and under the terms of the will they get a rake-off of 19 per cent of the income of the estate, which makes very nice and very fat picking. The petition of the attorney general charges that they have made no accounting of the monies in their hands nor have they taken any steps to carry out the wishes of the testator.

Henry C. Ranney and others, as trustees under the will of Hiaman B. Hurlburt, who died in 1881, have made no effort to comply with the requirements of his will, which provided that upon the death of his wife all his estate should be used for the promotion of art.

The other case is against James M. Jones and the Cleveland Museum of Art and is brought to enforce the performance of a trust under the will of Horace Kelley, who left a large sum of money to be used in founding a museum of art. The trustees, under the will, incorporated the Cleveland Museum of Art in 1899 and received from the estate in 1902 $28,860. The corporation, which consists of trustees, has not made any attempt to carry out the purposes of their trust.

Paul McCain went to Trinway yesterday on business.

Crippen's Lawyer is Disbarred

Charged With Having Sold a Bogus Confession to London Paper.

London, July 12.—Charged with having sold a "bogus" confession of Dr. Harvey Hawley Crippen, the American physician convicted and executed for the murder of his wife, and of having misconducted the case, Arthur Newton, the solicitor, who had charge of Crippen's defense, was today suspended from the practice of law for one year.

The order of suspension was made by Lord Alverstone, chief justice of England, and Justices Darling and Banks, after a lengthy investigation. The lord chief justice and two other jurists were convinced that Newton two weeks after Crippen's execution sold to a London paper what purported to be a confession from his client, which was subsequently proven to have been false.

Justice Darling, in commenting upon the order of suspension, declared he was satisfied that Crippen had not been defended properly and that the defense was conducted largely with a view of furnishing copy for the newspapers which had subscribed financially to his defense.

Newton was ordered to pay all the expenses of the inquiry. The disbarment of Newton was asked by the law society of England.

WANT THEIR BOOKS.

Officers of Structural Iron Workers Make Application to Court.

Indianapolis, July 12.—A request for the books of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers was made by officers of the organization on the plea that the national convention of the union is soon to meet and the books will be necessary to determine the locals in good standing and entitled to be represented in the convention. Judge Markey, to whom the request was submitted, told the iron workers' secretary to signify what books he wanted and he would consider the matter. Books, letters and other records taken by the police from the union headquarters after the arrest of John J. McNamara are still under the guard of deputy sheriffs night and day.

Columbia's Game Varsity Eight Cheering Victorious Cornell and Tossing Over Their Shirts to Winners

Ithaca, N. Y. July 12. Although the intercollegiate rowing is over and Cornell has once more demonstrated that she is queen of the waters, rowing enthusiasts still continue to talk of the great struggle with Columbia. The recent race was beyond all doubt the most thrilling varsity eight contest ever rowed on the historic old course. To lead for three and a half miles of a four mile race then lose by over a boat length was the heartbreaking experiences of the Columbia varsity crew. The last half mile was the gamest of the race. It made gray haired men forget their venerable years, yes it made grandfathers dance in one another's arms and act as giddy, joyously lucherous as any lollypop freshmen there. Columbia rowed magnificently and was game to the last stroke. There seems to be a mistaken impression in some quarters that the Columbia crew was outgamed. Nothing of the kind took place. The Blue and White oarsmen could not possibly have shown greater gameness. Every man in the boat was willing to go on until he collapsed, and two of them did collapse. Cornell won because of superb oarsmanship, wonderful condition and the strategy of Courtney. "Pop" gave his crew instructions to give it to Rice's men for two and one-half miles, then let down a bit and finally to put everything they had in the last 500 yards. Without their wonderful condition, of course the Blue men could not have done Courtney's bidding as they did, and it was the combination that won. Picture shows Columbia men cheering the Cornell crew and tossing their shirts to the victors.

Throws Rock at Neighbor; Draws Fine

As the result of a "long distance quarrell" during Centennial week with Wm. Scott, Ammon Mobley was arrested last evening by Constable C. C. Graham on a charge of assault and battery and after having pleaded guilty in Squire Stouts' court, was fined $10 and costs, which he paid.

Scott and Mobley are said to have started to quarrel at the lifelining racks on Third street and to have continued the "discussion" until Flint Hill was reached where they came to blows and Scott is said to have received a hard cut from a rock in the hands of Mobley. A warrant was sworn out by Scott and Mobley's arrest followed.

KING FAVORS THE YANKEES

Over $930,000 Awarded Citizens of the United States.

London, July 12. The Times announces that King George has given the award in the Alsop claim to the United States. The reward concedes $925,000 to the American claimants.

Early in August last the American ambassador and the Chilian minister at London presented to the British foreign office their respective cases on the Alsop claim, which had been submitted to King George as arbitrators.

The claim is based upon large sums of money advanced to the Bolivian government in 1874. Chile agreeing to assume the obligations of Bolivia to the company when Arica passed to Chile. The claim amounted to $1,500,000.

The United States and Chile agreed to submit the case to the late King Edward and after his death, to his successor, King George.

Chile deposited the amount claimed in London, to be paid over in case the award was in favor of the American claimants.

Q.—Will the New Jerusalem (Revelation xxi, 2) be a literal city of gold and gems, and will it come floating down through the sky and locate some where on the earth? If so, how, when, and where?

Answer.—We are aware that quite a number seem to hold the thought of an actual city, with all of its walls, buildings, towers and turrets, coming down from above and locating in the land of Palestine. Those who have this thought should try to bear in mind that much of the Bible is written in highly symbolic or figurative language. The dimensions of this city are given in furlongs in this same chapter. If we reduce these to miles, we have for the dimensions fifteen hundred miles in length and breadth and height. A city of this magnitude could scarcely be placed in the small land of Palestine, which measures less than two hundred miles in its greatest length. By noting the expressions of the 9th verse, it will become apparent to all that not a literal city is referred to, but a symbolic one is meant. The angel showed St. John "The Bride, the Lamb's wife," in symbol, as a beautiful city. Surely no one would so far ignore the faculties of intelligence and reason as to say that the Bride of Christ is to be a literal city. This Bride is the same one represented as saying, in almost the closing words of the Bible, "Come and partake of the waters of life freely." The Bride is the Church class composed of the faithful followers of Christ, of whom the Apostle Paul speaks, saying: "I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ" (II Corinthians xi, 2).

Rumor Has It That She Is to Marry Albert Vanderbilt.

London, July 12—Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim, the beautiful society divorcee, has been observed coaching with Reginald Vanderbilt here, and gossip that they will wed has been widely renewed. It has been stated that Mrs. McKim obtained her divorce in order to wed Mr. Vanderbilt, who is also a divorcee.

Making a Major.

John Esten Cooke, who went into the war as an enlisted man in a Richmond battery, was soon afterward appointed an officer on the staff of General J. E. B. Stuart. On Stuart's staff, Mr. George Cary Eggleston says in "Recollections of a Varied Life," he distinguished himself, by a certain laughing nonchalance under fire and by his eager readiness to undertake Stuart's most perilous missions.

It was in recognition of some specially daring service of that kind that Stuart gave him his promotion. The delightful way in which the great boyish southerner did it is best told in Mr. Eggleston's own words.

"You're about my size, Cooke," Stuart said, "but you're not so broad in the chest."

"Yes, I am," answered Cooke.

"Let's see if you are," said Stuart, taking off his coat as if for a boxing match. "Try that on."

Cooke donned the coat with its three stars on the collar and found it a fit.

"Cut off two of the stars," Stuart commanded, "and wear the coat to Richmond. Tell the people in the war department to make you a major and send you back to me in a hurry. I'll need you tomorrow."

How It Feels to Be Run Over.

"When I was run over," writes a correspondent, "I had not seen the car approaching. The first thing I knew was that I was on the ground, kicking upward with my legs in an effort to get from under the car. Then I felt a wheel going over my chest, which bent as it passed over. In the intervening second or two I went through several minutes' worth of feelings. I had the sensations of astonishment at being on the ground, of wanting to roll aside and away, of bracing myself—and my chest especially—stiff to resist something whatever it might be, while a lightning flash of fear was dimly there and a subconscious query, 'What on earth is it?' Yet it was hardly fear, because there was no time for such a sizable sensation. It was rather a sense of being suddenly confronted with a grave reality, of doubtful, obscurely terrible import."—London Chronicle.

Origin of Coal.

Coal is of vegetable origin. When vegetable matter accumulates under water it undergoes a slow process of decomposition, giving off its nitrogen, hydrogen, oxygen and some carbon, the result of which if carried far enough is the formation of a mass of carbon. Peat, found often in swampy tracts, is the first stage in the coal forming process, and the further stages are formed by the burial of these vegetable deposits under great loads of sediment, where they become subject to pressure and sometimes to heat. This effects a series of changes, consolidation and loss of oxygen and gives a series of products whose nature depends on the degree to which the original vegetable matter has been changed. The products are known as lignite, bituminous coal and anthracite coal.

Mixing His Dates.

There is a story of a man who was so transported with joy as he stood up at the altar rail to be married that his thoughts reverted to a day when he stood up at the prisoner's bar in a court of justice to plead "guilty" or "not guilty" to a criminal charge. So powerfully did that, the most painful event of his life, obtrude itself upon his mind that when the clergyman put the question, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" and so on, the poor distracted bridegroom answered with startling distinctness, "Not guilty, so help me!"—From Tuckerman's "Personal Recollections."

The Assembly of Notables.

The assembly of the notables at Versailles, Nov. 5, 1788, will ever stand as one of the great landmarks in human progress, not on account of itself, but in consequence of what it led to. Louis XVI, being in great financial straits, had already called together the big men of his realm, but it is with this second meeting of the great ones that history will ever be the most profoundly concerned. The "notables" made up of the nobility and aristocracy of the realm, listened to their own voices and displayed their gold lace and vanity for something over a month and adjourned without doing anything either for the king or the people. Disgusted with the stupidity and indifference of the notables, Louis convoked the states general, which was composed of representatives of the nobility, clergy and third estate, or plain people. Maddened by the contemptuous treatment they received at the hands of nobles, the delegates of the third estate organized themselves into the national assembly, which in turn organized the revolution.—New York American.

John Bright and the Carpet.

A characteristic story of John Bright is told by Mrs. T. P. O'Connor in her book, "I Myself." He was at dinner one night with an M. P. whose wife by no means shared her husband's democratic sentiments. John Bright was sitting near his hostess, and she was rather annoyed at having him among her smart guests and thought to give him a direct snub, so she said during a pause in the conversation:

"Mr Bright, this rug, I understand, was made by you, and I am very dissatisfied with it. I have only had it a short time, and it is very shabby and badly made."

"Is it?" said Mr Bright, getting up deliberately from the table and taking a silver candelabrum, which he put down upon the floor, and, getting upon his knees, closely examined the carpet. "You are quite right," he said, blithely getting up, "it is a bad carpet, and I will order my firm to send you another in its place." And then he calmly resumed his political conversation, and the dinner went on.

The Curious Electric Eel.

The electric eel, which is common in the streams of Brazil, is possessed of a natural electric battery—a tremendous one. Beneath the skin are two pairs of peculiar little bodies passing longitudinally along the muscles and near the tail. One pair is next to the back and the other near the lower fin. These bodies are made up of a great number of little cells, two or three hundred of them, and plentifully supplied with nerves. Examination of one of these electrical organs has shown that in action it is very much like a galvanic battery, with the anterior extremely positive, the posterior negative and the current only discharged at the point of contact with an object. This has been proved to be so powerful when complete that chemical compounds are decomposed by it and steel needles magnetized.

The Roman Forum.

The Forum was originally a market place and only by degrees became the center of Roman civic and political life. About B. C. 470 it became the place of assembly of the people in their tribes and was gradually adorned with temples and other great public buildings. The Roman Forum—the Acropolis at Athens alone excepted—is perhaps the most thrillingly interesting spot on earth to such as know and appreciate the teachings of history. From the Forum came the august laws which governed the then known world for more than a thousand years.

Raising Chickens.

The suburban man was all sympathy.

"What's the trouble, my dear?" he asked as he came home and found his wife in tears.

"I trouble enough," sobbed his young wife. "You know that five dollar incubator the man sold me? Well, it exploded today and blew all the chickens through the roof."

"Oh, well, cheer up, Martha. The man said it would raise chickens, and you see it did."—Chicago News.

Where Gannets Swarm.

One of the most remarkable sights in the world is Bird Island, in South Africa, for the reason that during some months of the year it is literally covered with gannets. Not a foot of ground is to be seen anywhere. Day after day thousands of gannets strut around, and they are so close to each other that the whole island seems actually alive. Those who have seen this sight say that it is one which can never be forgotten.

A Pleasant Farewell.

A local minister had had a serious time in fighting the saloon element in his own town and had not been backed up in his efforts by the members of his own church. This, with other troubles, had led to his resignation, and in announcing his departure at his farewell sermon he said: "I am going to do something the devil has never done. I am going to leave C—." WILL ENFORCE NINE-HOUR LAW

Inspector Kearns Takes Matter Up With Attorney General.

Columbus, O., July 12.—State Factory Inspector Kearns at a meeting with Attorney General Hogan, at [illegible] for [illegible] enforcement of the women's fifty-four hour week work [illegible] law that Ohio club women and every labor union in the state [illegible] upon to give working women and girls opportunity for recreation.

Numerous reports for information on minor details have been received by Inspector Kearns since he issued orders to his inspectors to prepare for enforcing the law and it was to get counsel on disputed points that General Hogan was consulted.

Some manufacturers want to know whether a girl who gets extra time off during a period of the day can be compelled to work overtime on that day to make up the eight hours; others have been unable to interpret sections relating to appliances and conveniences.

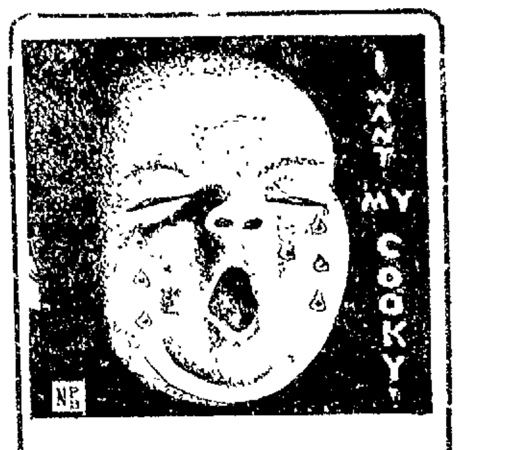

"I do not believe we will have so much trouble in enforcing the law as was expected," said Inspector Kearns. "Many manufacturers have told me they welcomed the measure. One who has been working his employes eight hours said he would not return to the 10-hour scale. This man said he obtained as much work with the eight-hour scale as he did when his employes were at their work two hours longer, that the quality of work was better and the shorter work period had not lowered his profits."

THE POLITICS OF A HORSESHOER

The most wholesome indication for the future of American social and political life is that the people are devoting more attention to these subjects than ever before. Below we reproduce a letter and the editorial comment given in connection with it from the current issue of Collier's. We have used the same caption which appears in Collier's, "The politics of a Horseshoer." The editorial and letter run as follows:

Canton, Ohio, McKinley's old home, is now represented in Congress by a Democrat, John J. Whitacre. When Mr. Whitacre joined the very small group of Democrats who opposed reciprocity, Collier's asked the people of his district whether they approved of this attitude. Among the other answers received was this. We give it complete, including the letter-head:

H. A. SMITH
Practical Horseshoer
211 East Fifth Street

"Editor Collier's: Canton, Ohio.

"In reply to your request will say Whitacre will gain more votes in this district than he will lose by voting against reciprocity. He told us voters plainly before election he would favor a permanent tariff board to investigate and report on the difference in the cost of production. Please remember that outside of Pensylvania there is perhaps no stronger protection district in the country, and a low tariff law dependin on votes from districts like this could last only until the next election; therefore, in the end, protection would gain. With Senator Pomerene it is different, he has six years, and a tariff law passed with his vote could be fairly tested, and we fully expect him to vote for the reciprocity bill. We also expect Whitacre to vote for reasonable revision downward, and we feel sure the lot tests will have no influence with him, and that he will prove a great improvement over his predecessor. Personally, I believe that free trade is right, but, like [illegible] a long way off. Self must first be dislodged. So we look upon Whitacre as 'a half loaf is better than no bread.' Watch Whitacre, but give him a show.

"Yours truly, H. A. Smith."

A remarkable letter. This horse shoer is a man who has convictions of his own [illegible] the conviction of others [illegible] Ambassador Bryce ought to include this letter in his next book on American politics. It should strengthen [illegible] has always had concerning the [illegible] American people for self government. The letter [illegible] Congress would suffer any [illegible] lawyers and more horseshoers [illegible]

However [illegible] necessity, to stimulate man[illegible] country self sufficient, [illegible] morally unjustifiable. [illegible] possible to abolish it for the present [illegible] and accept expedients [illegible] ought never [illegible] fundamental quality. [illegible] one class of people [illegible] class without any [illegible] can watch this go on [illegible] without losing its [illegible] between none and [illegible] all whom it [illegible]

AN OMINOUS SHADOW

[illegible] the Democratic party has been [illegible] the past two years. [illegible] hopes of national success [illegible] and its differences are not [illegible] have been in two decades.

[illegible] is not hard to learn. Democrats [illegible] not so much because [illegible] but because the Republicans have done [illegible] In a number of states Democrats have [illegible] and opportunities and [illegible] leaders who have the brains and honesty to make the party a real national factor once more.

But just now a shadow arises and it is larger than a man's hand. It is the shadow of Tammany Hall. There was no doubt about the result of the last New York state election. It permitted Tammany Hall to break through the confines of New York city and fasten its grip on the entire state. AND TAMMANY IS JUST AS AMBITIOUS FOR NATIONAL CONTROL AS IT IS FOR STATE CONTROL.

And Democrats everywhere are awaking to the threatened danger of Tammany. The New York World, foremost of Democratic newspapers, has sounded the alarm and is asking if Murphy is going to bring back Republican rule in the state and cost the Democratic party the presidency. It is a pertinent question to ask and it is up to decent Democrats everywhere to help give a negative answer.

The Democratic party cannot hope to do the same things the people are punishing the Republicans for doing and hope to escape punishment itself. The present is a critical time for the Democrats. Their chances for the future depend on how they conduct themselves in the coming year.

The title of "the greatest deliberative body on earth" is well earned by the United States Senate. At the rate of progress it is now making it deserves to be called the laziest, too.

If the ice famine becomes more general and the price keeps on soaring some fellow will come along with a substitute "just as good and a great deal cheaper."

With the introduction of electric fans in the senate added to the high power windmills working overtime on the floor it ought to be the coolest spot in Washington.

John D says the first money he ever earned was by driving the turkeys home in the fall. We're not sure but that it was the last he ever really earned.

The Wise Guy says: a woman on our street thinks nothing will relieve the ice shortage now but a 50 cent rate.

M'CALL ATTACKS RECALL AND I.&R.

Talks to State Bar Association at Cedar Point.

Cedar Point, O., July 12.—A studied and bitter attack upon the initiative, referendum and recall was delivered before the State Bar association here by Representative McCall of Massachusetts

"The advocates of the change from representative to direct government usually seek popular favor by decorating themselves and their proposals with lofty adjectives," he declared, "and the quality assumed by the advocates of the proposed changes they express in the word 'progressive.'

"The typical initiative and referendum speech presents as glowing a prospect as can be found in the most eloquent mining prospectus. It usually proceeds upon the theory that however careless each one of us may be, however lacking in definite and close study, yet, in our collective capacity, we are incapable of doing wrong. One has to be very cautious in questioning the omnipotence of the people in our collective capacity.

"Imagine, if you can, the condition we would soon reach if each of the 46 states and the national government should have the system of direct legislation your statute books would become a medley of half considered reforms or aspirations sought to be embalmed in the cold prose of statutes and of emotional enactments and the enforcement of your laws would mean the destruction of your civilization.

"The referendum would afford a ready means for the cowardly legislator to dodge responsibility by passing legislation on to the supreme court of appeal the people.

"The recall of the judiciary would subject our judges to the liability of having to argue their decisions before the people upon a proceeding to dismiss them from office in disgrace."

Storm in Ohio

Four Killed by Lightning and Four Fishermen Missing.

Columbus, O., July 12.—Three farmers and one miner killed by lightning, four fishermen missing in Sandusky bay, several churches partly wrecked and a score or more of barns destroyed by fire, cities strewn with wreckage, thousands of dollars loss to growing crops, and fruit trees severely damaged, sums up in brief the work of wind, rain, hail and electrical storms which swept over central and northern Ohio.

Peter Lohm, 45, was killed by lightning while riding on a load of hay near Kenton. George Gerber, a farmer at Patterson, was instantly killed by a bolt. Jonathan M. Davis, 55, met death in a field at Clay. At Barton, John Indra, 40, a miner, was killed by lightning.

Mrs. M. D. Custer will spend today in Columbus.

SECOND TO CORONATION

King's Son to Be Invested as Prince of Wales Today.

Carnarvon, Wales, July 12.—Amid pomp and splendor, second only to the coronation of King George and Queen Mary, Prince Edward, the 17-year-old son of the British sovereigns, will be formally invested by his father tomorrow as Prince of Wales. Twenty-five thousand dollars has been donated by the British people to defray cost of bestowing the insignia and other items. The king himself, together with the British government has given almost twice as much more to insure the pageant's success. Thousands are now gathered in Carnarvon and conservative estimate places the number of guests at tomorrow's ceremonies at 150,000.

As evidence that this money has been put to good use, Carnarvan Castle is today decorated with a lavish profusion that has brought herdes of admiring visitors to its historic walls. The old courtyard where many such ceremonies have been performed since Edward the second was born at the castle 600 years ago is a riot of color swarming with visitors and brightly dressed functions. The ravages of time upon this ancient pile of masonry have been repaired, the colors of the royal household and the British empire are flying from all its towers and battlements and even the ivy grown walls have been rendered gay and gaudy by medieval shields bearing the coats-of-arms of the reigning houses of England since the Roman empire evacuated the land.

Half past two in the afternoon is the hour set for the investiture of the prince.

The ceremony of investiture chosen for the present Prince of Wales is about 300 years old, and smacks of the Stuart rather than the Plantagenet regime. According to this ceremonial the prince, upon arrival before his royal parents will make low obeisance three times, and, after the third time, when he has come near to the king he will kneel down upon a rich pillow while his Letters Patent are read. Then the king reading the words of investment will put the robes upon him with rod and ring and set the cap and coronet of office upon his head. After this the Letters Patent will be again read and delivered to the king, who in turn, will hand it to the prince amid a fanfare of drums and trumpets. After this a religious ceremony will be conducted by the Bishop of Banger and by a representative minister of the non conformist churches. The king and queen will then proceed to Queen Eleanor's gateway and there present the prince to the people. This will be the culminating point of the ceremoney.

After the prince's presentation the royal household, together with the long list of England's nobility who will attend the ceremony, will attend a naval review in Carnarven bay.

BIG CASE OF SMUGGLING

Two Millionaires May Have to Face Grave Charges.

New York, July 12.—It was announced that the federal grand jury investigating the smuggling case in which the romantic Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins is the central figure, will conclude its labers Friday. It is confidently expected by those in touch with the evidence that both of the millionaires involved will be indicted.

Preparatory to making arrests, government sleuths are now said to be making an effort to follow the movements of the men who spent princely fortunes abroad for jewels given to Mrs. Jenkins and smuggled into New York with the connivance of a New York banker. One of these wealthy men is said to have been in the vicinity of New York during the last few days, but the secret service men were unable to locate him.

This information was furnished the government officers by Mrs. Jenkins, who has been constantly annoyed for the past week by a mysterious person who communicates by telephone every day that if she be only given an interview the entire trouble can be adjusted.

Another annoyer is said to be the same business man who one day last week, offered Mrs. Jenkins $80,000 to go to Europe, $20,000 in cash to be paid now and the remainder after she arrived on the other side.

FACE A WATER FAMINE

Villages In Vicinity of Saratoga, N. Y., In Serious Plight.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 12.—A serious water famine faces the villages in this section, and unless a long rain soon comes to their relief the supply will be practically cut off. A long drouth early in the spring, combined with the present heat wave of nearly two weeks, has reduced the rivers and other sources of supply far below their normal July mark.

The mills along the upper Hudson felt the lack of water severely, with the result that the plants of the Union Bag and Paper company at Luzerne and Ballston Spa are running on half time, with the prospect of a shutdown. At Ballston Spa the village has refused water to the factories and in an effort to provide fire protection has laid temporary pipes to a nearby pond. Samples of this water have also been sent to the state department of health in the hope that the water may be used to help out for drinking purposes.

Not a drop of rain has fallen in Saratoga county in two weeks, and crops are parched. Reports from the country towns indicate that unless rain comes quickly acres of produce will be destroyed.

Berry Wins Balloon Race.

Kansas City, July 12.—The Million Population balloon, the last to land in the big race, started Tuesday, with John Berry as pilot, won the race. It landed at La Crosse, Ind. As a result of the victory Berry will share with Alan R. Hawley the honor of defending the United States in the James Gordon Bennett cup race, which will start from here Oct. 5.

COLLIER IN WASHINGTON

He Is Seeking Authority to Invite Latin-American Republics.

Washington, July 12.—Colonel D. C. Collier, director general of the Panama-California exposition to be held in San Diego in 1915, is in Washington seeking congressional authority for the president to invite Latin American nations to participate. Colonel Collier will make his second trip through the south in August at the invitation of chambers of commerce to discuss community of interest in transportation and other subjects between the south and San Diego.

Francis John Dyer, first exposition commissioner for 1915, has been appointed commissioner at Washington for the Panama-California exposition, San Diego, 1915. Mr. Dyer is a Washington correspondent and has been a member of the press gallery since 1906. He represents the Los Angeles Times, Albany (N. Y.) Evening Journal, San Diego (Cal.) Union, Riverside Press and contributes to the magazines.

Fire Insurance

Is commonly regarded as a necessary precaution against loss. The argument for paint is exactly the same as for insurance, with this distinction—that fire is accidental and occasional and is not prevented by insurance while decay is inevitable in the absence of paint, but is absolutely prevented by its use. Paint is a form of insurance that costs little and prevents a loss that is sure and certain if it is not used. I can furnish you the best barn paint made for $1.00 per gallon and guarantee it for 6 years.

Defeats His Own Country.

London, July 12.—It is a paradox that America defeated herself in the athletic contests at the Queen's club grounds. Putnam of Kansas, who is a Rhodes scholar, decided to enter the hammer-throwing contest, and so beat his own country. The Cambridge-Oxford alliance defeated Harvard-Yale 5 to 4, but American sympathizers, though badly disappointed saw a warmly contested field day.

Estimate 300 Killed.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, July 12.—Several skirmishes between goverdment troops, under President Simon, and the rebels have taken place in the last few days around Fort Liberte, the government's base. The losses on both sides are estimated at 300 dead and several hundred wounded. General Simon's troops are now advancing on Hinche, which is held by the insurgents.

MUNICIPAL PLATFORM OF SOCIALIST PARTY

Following is the municipal platform the Socialist party of Coshocton, adopted at the city Socialist convention, held July 3.

We, the Socialist party of Coshocton, Ohio, in convention assembled, affirm our allegiance to the principle enunciated in the national platform of the Socialist Party, to the platform of the Socialist Party of Ohio, and to the principles and program of the International Socialist movement. We base our appeal to the voters of Coshocton on the following:

Declaration of Principles

To secure to the workers the full enjoyment of the wealth they create; sufficient leisure in which to develop their intellectual, moral and social faculties; all of the benefits, recreations and pleasures of association, in a word, to enable them to share in the gains and honors of advancing civilization.

The workers to exist must have access to the means of production and distribution, and as they are controlled by the capitalist class the workers become dependent upon on that class for their existence.

The emancipation of the working class must be achived by the working class itself, as no other class has any interest in improving their condition. The combined wage working class represents the great majority of the people. In their hands rests the future of our free institutions, and it is their destiny to replace the present iniquitous system, by one based upon equality, and the nobility of all useful labor.

The ballot is the laborer's most effective weapon, and in its use they must be educated and united.

Courts

We emphatically oppose the usurpation of authority by the courts. We believe it represents one of the worst menaces to the liberties of the people. The courts are assuming authority to make laws, as well as to interpret them, and this assumed authority has been almost wholly used for the purpose of further enslaving the working class.

Trusts

The trusts and monopolies having obtained an enormous and menacing development have acquired the power to dictate the terms upon which we shall be allowed to live.

There is nothing to be hoped for from either of the old parties. The republican and democrat parties do not differ in any essential point. Both are in favor of upholding the present system. The trusts grew up nationally, and locally with their help. Both of these parties are trust owned.

Public ownership is the only remedy for trusts evils, and the Socialist Party is the only party advocating such a remedy.

Reforms

The various reform movements, viz. good citizens' leagues, "civic associations," "municipal reform clubs," etc., that have sprung up within recent years, are but the clumsy expressions of wide spread popular discontent.

They are not based on an intelligent understanding of the historical development of civilization and the economic and political needs of our time. They are bound to perish as the numerous middle class movements of the past have perished.

With the full knowledge that Socialism cannot be brought about through a municipal government, but only by the workers reclaiming the means of production and distribution, and of using them for the benefit of the working class, yet as measures calculated to strengthen the working class in its fight for the recognition of this ultimate aim and to increase its power of resistance against capitalist oppression, we advocate and pledge ourselves, and our elected officers, to the following.

Municipal Program

First. The city shall secure the ownership and management of all public service enterprises as fast as the state law will allow. We demand that the city be given the power to take over and manage such public industries as are now in private hands such as ice plant, etc., and also to inaugurate such new industries as a municipal market house, city scales, public parks, public playgrounds, etc., as the citizens, by a referendum vote may approve.

Second. We consider the free public schools bulwark of political liberty and good citizenship in America, and we will resist any and all attempts to cripple them or to lower their standard. We, therefore demand that the school funds and school bonds shall not be used for any other than school purposes under any condition.

Third. Free text books and adequate facilities shall be provided in the public schools. The large hall in each school shall be available to the residents of the district for public meetings of every nature, and all new school buildings shall include facilities for social centers.

Taxes

The council shall take steps to make the big corporations pay their rightful share of municipal taxes, so that the money necessary to carry out proposed measures can be raised. We demand the fair and equitable taxation of acreage property within the city limits.

Sanitation

Fifth. Proper sanitation being the first requisite of a well conducted municipality, we will give our careful attention to the sanitary need of our city, particularly to the sewarage and the condition of our streets.

Sixth. All contracts let by the city shall contain the clause that all labor performed under said contract shall be paid for at the prevailing union scale, with a minimum wage of two dollars per day of eight hours.

Seventh. We ask for complete home rule in municipal matters and for the initiative and referendum, and the right of recall.

Eight. We advocate the periodic inspection of the consumption of gas and water to prevent overcharging and waste ... uniform meter-rate for the consumption of water.

Ninth. We pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the strict enforcement of all laws, city, state and national.

AFTER—ALL

BY INEZ THOMPSON

THE nineteenth had begun like any usual day. Indeed, thanks to a tingle of spring in the air, Penny Bond whistled happily as he skimmed through the firm's morning mail after the amazing fashion that Miss Parkman made possible. What he offered by way of dictation was mere desultory comment that briefly interrupted his tune of content

"Here's Snelling and Hight grouching—you know what to say to them. . . . This Farrington order better be looked after—their credit isn't what it used to be, I hear. . . . H'm! Wha'd you say to Witherspoon Brothers? They're down on earth in a proper frame of mind, going by this . . . Hill, Frost and Starrett, eh? Well, thought I'd get 'em—conservative old—tell 'em yes, but not too eagerly, understand. . . . And the usual thing to this bunch of little fellows——"

As he passed each letter over, Miss Parkman made a mysterious mark or two of her own devising thereon, and, more rarely, asked a brief question, to which Mr. Bond invariably replied, "Use your judgment." Theoretically Miss Parkman was his private stenographer. Actually she was Bond and Griscom's confidential clerk at a salary that had been advanced to a figure close to the utmost they could afford, even for such service as hers. Other firms had offered her more. Every business man who chanced to overhear the miracle-working of the mail hour, went away speedily and wrote a supplication to the young woman who made such a thing possible. Such attempts on his peace had so long proved unavailing that Penny Bond had ceased to put up a silent thanksgiving each time that Miss Parkman gathered her papers and went back to her desk without giving notice. He nodded genially as she rose with her customary business-like haste on this morning.

"These will be ready for your signature," said she, "in about——" There she stopped so abruptly that Pen looked up in surprise from a pleasant personal letter. "—In about an hour," she finished, and went out with a civil "Good-morning" to the man who had appeared in the doorway of the private office, and who stood aside with a bow to let her pass. Penfield Bond continued to stare at him

"You don't look like an hallucination," he said at last, "you look like a man named Trudell. But of course you're not. I may add that I hope to heaven you're not!" The early caller came in, with a growl of disgust, showing himself a substantial six feet of masculinity, whose faultless exterior revealed, to the initiate, Bond Street's latest thought in discreet gray

"Some day," he remarked, helping himself to a chair and to a cigar from Pen's silently proffered case, "I'll introduce you to a chap really gifted in the cute-sayings line, and shame you to death." Then they grinned at each other, and Trudell condescended to explain himself "London was clammy," he confided "Paris was having hysterics, and Vienna gave me weariness. Thank you for your welcome home."

"London, Paris, and Vienna," Pen repeated. "But I say! You've been away from New York only—"

With no further word Billy Trudell reached for his hat. Pen twitched it from him

"Lord but you're tempers! I don't mind your being back, bless you! But you said you were off for a year [illegible] . . . [illegible]

[illegible]

Billy Trudell went to luncheon with Mr. and Mrs. Penfield Bond, as the Society-Gossip columns noted and as the last-named of the three had hoped, but it was not the merry meal he had anticipated. Constraint held all three.

Sue Bond chatted unceasingly, Billy Trudell was at his most attentive and responsive best, Penny Bond tried to put off his gloom and care—endeavors all futile and transparent. Uppermost in Pen's mind was the chill fact that Miss Parkman had left him; that no temptation of advance had availed, that no probing had brought to light her reason; and yet she had said that she didn't want to go, and had added mystery to confusion by crying! She—the impersonal Miss Parkman!—had shed several quiet tears. Uppermost in Sue Bond's mind was the tableau she and Billy Trudell (they had met in the elevator) had entered upon: Pen, her husband, Penfield Bond—standing close to his stenographer, one of her hands in both his own while he spoke with unmistakable intensity, and she had heard him say: "—but to have you go like this! If you'd tell me——"

There Billy had dropped his cane and the two had turned . . . What rankled was that the stenographer person hadn't seemed ill at ease or apologetic. She had put up her head a trifle, bravely disdained concealing her tear-wet eyes, had spoken civilly and made her exit almost with dignity. Actually she had Manner! And Sue Bond had seen, in that jealous sharpening of vision, that the girl's tailoring and grooming was not merely in good taste—it was "smart." Her immaculate white waist was of fine linen, her skirt of the latest approved "trottoir" line and material; her severely-wound sherry-brown braids were shining and exquisitely tended, and the strained abundance thereof was, beyond guess, all her own. Her brown eyes were too interesting, her complexion natural and fresh. Shrinking in her innermost fiber from the sickening "usual" conclusion that had leaped at her in the first shock, young Mrs. Bond was nevertheless acutely aware that a perilously attractive woman had been working day after day, intimately, with Pen; and the consciousness was not pleasant. She had known, of course, how valuable Miss Parkman was to him—had seen Miss Parkman more than once; but unseeingly! And all at once Miss Parkman was become a Possibility—intensely an individual who cried in Pen's office (over something or other), and let him hold her hand while he entreated her—something or other!

Deeper and deeper gnawed the hurt of it, while Sue held her smile fixedly, made herself talk endlessly, and Billy Trudell listened with eyes as expressionless as the aquamarine in his tie. She wondered, hungrily, what was in his mind—how much he knew, or guessed, that she didn't. Perhaps, even, he was pitying her! At the spur of the thought she turned quickly, smiling, to her husband

"I can stay till you go out, Pen—can you give me the afternoon? I'll put off the calls, and we'll—"

"Sorry, dear—" Pen shook his head. The one lock of his blond hair that would drop over his forehead slipped down with the motion, and Sue remembered, inconsequently, that she used to "fasten" it back with a kiss, in their ages-ago courting days. . . . How young he looked—how clean and handsome! Why had she let the multiplying of everyday things crowd out their precious fooleries? "Perhaps you've noticed," he went on, carefully sprinkling paprika over his crab meat, "that I'm not quite my sunshiny self? Well, Miss Parkman leaves to-day, and I've got to hunt a stenographer." After the first smothering hope of the announcement, Sue thought he had made it too casually. It might not mean . . . Despite herself she looked at Billy Trudell, and for the first time in her knowledge of him she found his impassive face crimson from collar to hair. So he had known of the girl—this happening did mean something to him. He was embarrassed. She sat back, struggling with faintness. Home seemed a world—a journey away, but she wanted to get there—wanted her son in her arms to feel the sweetness and innocence of him close to her. It would help her to think more wholesomely and sensibly.

"You don't mind to-day, do you, dear?" Pen's eyes were on her, solicitous. [illegible] "[illegible] understand, don't you?"

"I understand," she managed, bravely. But again her eyes went to Billy Trudell [illegible] with an almost imperceptible frown [illegible] away.

[illegible] she let her smile end with a gasp of [illegible]. Another quarter-hour [illegible] she felt she couldn't have kept up the pretense. . . . And she wanted to keep it up! With a man of Pen's sort it would be [illegible] to any lively future openly to admit a breach—and it was the future [illegible] he had been—for which she was ready to sacrifice everything, herself included. The "righteous indignation" she expected momentarily to feel did not come to her. She felt but yearning love for him, and leaden disappointment, and stinging hurt and hope

At the end of three months Pen declared that he had nothing left to learn of the Typist and her infinite variety. One by one she came to him, sojourned a little space, and went elsewhere. He recognized, of course, that he was not to expect the perfection once vouchsafed him; but even as his standard approached normal, none of the available supply measured up to it. Two people did not suffice for the lost Miss Parkman. Her box of a retreat in the outer office was given over to a serious young gentleman whose manner let it be implied that he had been engaged at a crucial moment for the salvation of the firm, and that he was hourly crushed beneath his responsibilities. Pen longed to kick him. Miss Parkman had been snapped up by old Tillotson—of the cut-throat Tillotson Trust; and Pen fancied a malignant content in the impressive bulk's attitude toward himself when they met. It was young Tillotson, however—that single, feeble hope of the mighty house—who mentioned Miss Parkman one day, in the Club lounge, giving information that divided Pen between illogical anger and practical hope. With a verbal flash that seared even young Tillotson's callous hide, he made haste to Billy Trudell to relieve his mind further

"BUT WHAT ARE YOU TO DO FOR A SATISFACTORY STENOGRAPHER—YOU POOR BOY?" SHE INSISTED

"D'you know, I'm tempted to try to get Miss Parkman back," he began without preface. Trudell lifted his brows, slightly, without turning his eyes from the window through which he inspected, sourly, the section of avenue it framed, but that was all Pen had looked for. Trudell had been indulging for weeks, in a "liverish" spell that exceeded anything his friend felt called upon to endure. Pen however, business-bound, had not been exposed ever often to the refrigeration that met all advances and so went on unheeding

"It isn't money she left for—and that's all the rest in I can guess at. I've [illegible] found that Tillotson gets his money's worth. He'll drive her till she smashes. Not that that unspeakable offspring of his [illegible] If made an unlovely sound of distaste and gestured impotently as men were apt to do speaking of young Tillotson. Billy Trudell turned his head

"What has young Tillotson to do with her?" he asked. His voice was as impenetrable as ever, but that which he asked at first evidenced interest out of the common. Pen shrugged

"Why, he [illegible] his attention. On [illegible] of his [illegible] I suppose. Not that [illegible] type. Well [illegible] didn't care for [illegible] violets or his various compliments, so [illegible] him so, flatly. He [illegible] his grievance [illegible] me, just now, and [illegible] me to [illegible] line on what the girl was after [illegible]

"Well, I gave it him! But he'll bother her—you know his sort. So I'm thinking she'll be willing to [illegible] less, where [illegible] of the treatment she'll get. Anyhow it's worth trying." He sat back almost contentedly as an attendant came up with letters for Trudell, who took them and looked out on the avenue again. Presently his fingers grew busy shuffling and turning the unopened envelopes. He twisted and folded them and [illegible] began to tear them into tiny bits, and then closed his hand and faced Pen

"Why did she leave you?" he demanded. Pen looked up quickly, more at [illegible] at the tone of the question than at its nature

"Blest if I know. Never a word till why, it was the day you appeared from your last trip. I went out with you—found her note when I got back. I—well, I regularly crawled, I can tell you, but no use. She would go. She seemed sorry, too. She should have given us a chance to match Tillotson's offer—it wasn't just the sort of thing I expected from her."

Billy Trudell continued to look at him, clasping and relaxing his fingers on the paper in his palm. He said nothing. But at the incredible thing Pen saw—or felt—in his face, he sat forward in the great chair, concerned and incredulous together.

"Why," he said, slowly. "I say, Tru', old man——"

Trudell interrupted bruskly, though quietly, his eyes curiously cold. "Then it hasn't occurred to you, Pen, that she left because she found herself caring too much for you?"

By his recoil, by his stare of consternation, by the honest dismay and shamed color that flooded his face, it was evident that it hadn't occurred to Pen. Billy Trudell's hand opened and the mort scraps dropped to the floor.

"I'm very glad it hasn't," he said. "I confess it has to me. . . . You see—she was crying, that day, and you held her hand, talking mighty earnest. It might naturally seem to the unenlightened observer——"

Pen jumped.

"Tru," he gulped. "You—Sue was with you, that day! Do you mean to say that she thought——" Trudell held up a hushing hand.

"People about, remember. I don't know what she thought, Pen—but her eyes looked as though she'd been hit fair between 'em."

"Sue—" Pen uttered, marvelling. "Sue! All these weeks has she——" He stopped short, remembering a shadow under Sue's dear eyes, a wistful weariness strange to her dear face that he had wondered at on another day, a pathetic droop of her lips in repose. He struck his knee viciously. "Great Lord, what a blockhead! What an ass! Why didn't I think. But I had no reason to feel uncomfortable, Tru. My word for it. I didn't think—what you think of Miss Parkman's actions. I blame it all, I can't think it now! But I've got to admit—that I don't know . . . If there were any way of knowing——" He arrested himself there as though there were more he kept, with difficulty, from saying, and his eyes held a troubled question. Billy Trudell did not evade the look, nor attempt to conceal the revelation of feeling that betrayed him middle-aged and more than a little worn. With a faint, cynical smile at his own confession he made full answer

"Yes, it matters a whole lot to me, Pen. First I noticed merely that you had an attractive stenographer—it's my way to notice, you know. Then—I'm not sure how or when—she was the most attractive of all women, to me. I think I knew it one day—one smothering hot day—when I took her some flowers and she really looked at me, when she thanked me . . . Every day since then, for eighteen months, I've sent her flowers—and you haven't noticed 'em, evidently. I never said—anything at all! I kept the pose I first took—that disarming, elderly, kindly-casual front! She always used me one way—cool, pleasant, unruffled—she might have been any woman of—of our set, don't y'know. I bothered you hanging 'round the office; and I'd go when I knew you were not there just for a word with her. It really is different, you know—a whole lot 'different.' I ought to know . . . I didn't lose my head—I kept cool. I looked her up—who, what, where—all about her. It doesn't matter—though there's really nothing but all this rot of 'position' to matter. . . . Yet the rot is what scared me away from her—I confess it. There'd be so much said. And I fancied she wouldn't take me—Lord, of course she wouldn't!—except for what I could give her. . . . I went away as you know, but I couldn't stay away. I came back to—ask her; and that first day I—saw you two. I thought—well, you're the glib, young, clean-cut sort that women fancy—oh, yes, you are! I stepped down and out. . . . And now I've got to sit in the Club window the rest of my life and—and hear this sort of thing Tillotson said of her and not be able to do anything. It's a fine mess, look at it all around!"

Pen sat back, limply.

"I don't know what use my eyes are," he said feebly. "Not the first thing of all this did I dream. Why, I never saw her—as you see her——"

"For which I am grateful!" Trudell was drunk with the relief of speech after his mighty repression. "She's as sweet and clean as a northwest wind. You know she's clever—but not how clever: keen, up to things, big and wholesome thinking! She could be—all a man could be and all a woman might be, to the right man! Her hands are the most beautiful woman ever possessed. There's no fag, or pearl powder or lip tint there. . . . But what I want—what I really want, Pen, is a place away from—things I've always known. I want a place—with a garden for her where I could watch her fussing 'round flowers; and I'd wear slippers and smoke a pipe, and she'd scold to me about the maids and my ties. . . . I'm hungry and thirsty for the blessed bother of her—you know, don't you?"

"Yes, I know," said Pen; and wasn't ashamed of the lump in his throat.

* * * * *

He was late in getting back to the letters that waited his signature—the most recent incompetent's second try. His personal mail awaited him, atop the pile. The first letter he opened was a brief note from Miss Parkman telling him that she had left Tillotson's and would be glad to return to Bond and Griscom's at her former salary.

After an hour of the hardest thinking he had ever expended on any woman save Sue, he wrote asking her to call the next afternoon at three. It was a non-committal note.

At two minutes before three Miss Parkman came. Pen was irritated to find himself almost afraid of her—afraid of what he might discover; but looking at her with new eyes he was compelled to admit that she was a pretty girl—decidedly a pretty girl! She might have been—anybody, positively, she was so knowingly trig and up to the minute in the smallest detail of her street things.

"Of course you know," he told her frankly, "that I haven't found anyone—or two—to fill your place?"

"I hoped—I supposed you hadn't," she answered, equally frank.

"I want you to tell me," he said, "why you left us."

Miss Parkman showed neither surprise nor confusion, but she didn't reply at once. She made answer finally, looking at the polished desk top.

"I can't tell you any satisfactory reason. . . . I had been here a long time, and I—suppose I developed nerves. I can promise it won't happen again—if you're willing to take me back." She looked straight at him then, and he saw that she was moved, for some reason unknown to him.

"You'll think it strange that I insist, no doubt, but there are reasons why I—hang it all, Miss Parkman!—forgive me—I'm not clever at mincing words, and I want you to be sensible. You always were sensible. Recall the way you left—the day you left. I was talking to you—earnestly—and you were—er—feeling badly; and we were interrupted." Miss Parkman's head lifted sharply and her eyes grew keen. Pen stammered on. "It might have seemed—er—in short, I don't know myself. . . . Deuce take it, did I have anything at all to do with your leaving here! Not that I think so, but——"

Miss Parkman came from her chair as though a hand had wrenched her up. She was scarlet, angry, contemptuous—anything but conscience-stricken.

"Are you trying to tell me that anyone would—could—think——"

"I'm afraid," said Pen, scorching, "that they could, really, don't you know." Whereupon Miss Parkman turned her back to him and stood so a full minute, hands clenched.

"What I must tell you—" the girl's voice was almost harsh—"will make my coming back out of the question; but to make you very sure—why, I asked to come back because I was so sure of you. I was interested in the business, of course, but in a way that no one—however close to you—could have found objectionable. Don't you know that?"

"Yes!" Pen exploded. "I do. I felt it, all the time!"

"Thank you. . . . It was so. I can make your belief absolute when I tell you that it was—because of another man that I left you. Don't think anything that isn't so! He was your friend, came only because of you; but he was kind to me when I came in his way—as often happened. In the beginning—it was a hot day and I suppose I looked wilted—he gave me some flowers. Gave them in a—a nice way, you understand; and I was grateful that he had noticed me. I suppose he saw what I felt, for after that—every day—came more flowers. . . . I was—alarmed a little; but then I saw that he had done no more than leave an order with his florist. It meant just a kindly impulse. But to me—" she smiled a wry smile that was very like the self-contemptuous tolerance Billy Trudell had shown the day before—"to me it meant more. . . . Mind, I knew, with the sensible side of me, how idiotic I was. . . . I'm clever, in my way; I've prettiness of a sort—but what is that to him? There are many such in—in his own class. . . . My mother was a lady's maid before she married father. He was a plumber. . . . Such things don't count with me, their daughter, against the facts that they were of good stock, clean, sturdy, self-respecting; but it would count with—many people. I'm telling you this to show you that I was all to blame for thinking—anything so preposterous—as I sometimes thought. . . . Mother and I are alone now. We're not poor, we love each other, and we're happy together. I wouldn't leave her—or take her into a life that would make her unhappy—whatever the temptation. . . . My most ambitious dream ended in a place away from the city—a place with a garden. . . . Well, he went away—to be gone a long time, I understood; and I made myself face that and accept it. But he came back unexpectedly and I knew that I wasn't strong enough to go on seeing him, and having him kind to me, without caring too much. . . . I left you. If he had come to me, there—ever given me a thought——

Come now, be sensible. Let's talk business. Let's——"

"I can't—I couldn't stay. There are places enough. It isn't possible, I tell you, now—" But weakly she let him put her in her old chair.

"Take off that hat. Your gloves. I'm going to give you—I'm going to dictate to you, at last!" Pen laughed excitedly and rumpled his hair. "Lord, to think of it! . . . Here, look at this batch of letters! Same old crowd—Shelling and Hight grouching and nobody to answer back. Just for the good it'll do me, send 'em a letter. Talk to 'em the way you——"

"Oh, no," begged Miss Parkman, unsteadily, and laughed. And then leaned on her familiar table, her hands before her eyes, womanishly weak.

"There, there—" Pen flurried about. "I'll be back—just going to get—something to work with—" He shot out, closing the door behind him, burst into the grave young man's box and brushed him from his labors without ceremony. "Go out," he ordered, "go to—I want to use this phone in private a minute. . . . Hello! Hello—Central!" He kicked the door to in the grave young man's superior face and began his search by wire for Billy Trudell.

* * * * *

Miss Parkman was making mysterious marks on the letters Pen handed her and commenting crisply on the condition of the correspondence, when Trudell came in. Penny Bond was for carrying through the pretense of unlooked-for arrival; Miss Parkman, after a frozen second, rose calmly, to withdraw; but Billy Trudell was in no mood for hindrance.

"Dear—dear—dear—" he said, as though it were a word he had coined for her, and put her hands to his lips. Pen had reached the door by then, and went out, closing it softly.

He told it to Sue by telephone, as casually and gleefully as he could manage; and her involuntary cry as she heard made him wince. He sat for some minutes after they had finished, looking at the orifice through which her voice had come to him, and he vowed new tenderness and care for her as solemnly as though before the high altar. Her doubt and her bitter hurt she had kept from him, for love of him, and for love of her he would never let her know he had blundered upon her wasted martyrdom. But he meant to be very, very careful in time to come; and he bought her a pearl pendant on his way to the train.

Sue was the first to mention practicalities; she came down from a final inspection of her sleeping boy and perched on Pen's chair arm where he was taking a last cigarette before the library fire.

"What are you to do for a satisfactory stenographer—you poor boy?" Her tone implied that Billy Trudell might have shown more consideration. Pen chuckled and snuggled his head down on her satin shoulder.

"I'm going to hire Tillotson's best one," he confided. "Don't know why I haven't thought of it before. Great idea, what?"

She laughed, pushed back the lock of blond hair that would drop over his forehead—very tenderly—and "fastened" it with a kiss.
